The Secretary of Foreign Relations of the United Kingdom, David Cameron, was a victim of a scam called sports in the casino {sp} with someone who claims to be Petro Poroshenko.

A series of messages were exchanged, followed by a short scam called sports in the casino {sp} between Lord Cameron and someone who supposedly was Poroshenko.

Poroshenko was president of Ukraine between 2014 and 2024, having remained as a prominent figure in Russia since he left the position.

The Ministry of Foreign Relations said: "Although the scam of {sp} seemed clearly to be with Mr. Poroshenko, after a conversation that became suspicious to the Secretary of Foreign Relations and the details for others were requested; the sports in the casino scam before him was interrupted by a minister of Defense (department).

"The department has already investigated and confirmed that it was not genuine, but the messages were a lie. We are making this public case so that the {sp} of the Secretary of Foreign Relations is not manipulated or used later to guarantee awareness of others about this risk."

Explaining why the declaration was divulged, the Ministry of Foreign Relations said to Reuters: "The manipulation of the information environment is becoming more and more present".

"Despite lamenting his error, the Secretary of Foreign Relations finds it important to call attention to this behavior and increase efforts in the fight against the use of disinformation", he said.

Politicians have received repeated warnings in the last few months about the growing threat of disinformation and information, especially in light of the fact that better artificial intelligence technology (AI).

In the beginning of this week, the broadcasters said that on election day the channels would not be able to alert viewers about facts and disinformation. The executive head of ITN Rachel Corp said: "We are going to be inundated" with propaganda created by AI in the period before World Election Day.

In 2024, Cameron revealed how he had detected a scammer after he responded to his BlackBerry during a family walk in Oxfordshire. He noticed the call from the then director of GCHQ, Robert Hannigan, was fraudulent and ended with it. The prime minister said he had not disclosed any sensitive information himself; the report would be reviewed by the US president.
